COLLATERAL CRISIS

When finance becomes a weapon.
Who are the targets?

Four women.
Four destinies.
One story.

None of them knows
the others.
Thousands of miles
separate them.

And yet...
Their destinies are
already intertwined.
They have no idea that a decision made by a Stranger will change
their future.
Little by little, invisible
connections begin to emerge.

Every decision.
Every encounter.
Every choice.
Echoes through someone
else's life.

In twenty days,
none of them will ever see the world the same way again.

We believe we live separate lives.
This novel shows why that's not true.

SARAH on Mr. CANON's side.

A brilliant teenager who refuses to let her future be written for her.

KAREN on ALANE's side.

A woman who uncovers that certain numbers hide a face.

RINAÉ on NIKOS's side.

A young Greek woman who refuses to give up on her dreams despite the hardship in her country.

SOPHIE on MARC's side.

A humanitarian who fights for those
the world prefers to forget.

Why this Book.

During the 2011 financial crisis, the media reported daily on interest rates, sovereign debt and financial markets and bailout plans.

The numbers were everywhere.
People, far less so.

Collateral Crisis is not a simple question:
What happens to the women and men
hidden behind those numbers?

Through four stories set in the United States,
the United Kingdom, Greece and Kenya, the novel reveals how economic decisions made in financial spheres can sometimes affect the lives of people
who have no part in them.

It does not seek to explain finance.

It seeks to show what it can cause
when it stops being merely a tool
and becomes a force that shapes lives.

About the Author.

Saren Riso is the pseudonym of a French author.

Rather than putting himself forward,
he prefers to let his characters tell the story.

His first novel, Collateral Crisis, is the result of several years of work and research into the mechanisms of the European financial crisis
and its human consequences.

Through a choral structure, he blends fiction,
economics and individual destinies to explore how decisions made in financial spheres
can impact the lives of people
who have no part in them.
